ECONOMIC TICKET CO. HAS ENDLESS CHAIN

It Costs a Dollar to Jump In and Three Friends to Pull You Out.

"If we had some crackers we'd have some cheese, and if we had some cheese..."

But the manager is not so brief in the explanation of his general offer to reduce the cost of transportation by 500 per cent.

"Yes, sir, you want to hear about the ticket transaction?" he begins, running to a roll top desk that is inhabited only by a few books of coupons.

"One Begins by Paying a Dollar." "You begin by paying us a dollar for this book of coupons," he continues.

"All your friends have got to do is to dispose of the coupons in their books in the same way and then they get their tickets."

"Contract on Back of Book." All the successive steps in the transaction are stated plainly in a contract on the back of the book.
